

At rise: a stage. Perhaps there are costume pieces on racks or a line. Perhaps there are various props. Perhaps, even, there are rehearsal blocks. It's dimly lit.

NARRATOR

It all started, as you might imagine, with a Big Bang.

A loud thump.

GOD

OUCH!

NARRATOR

God had hit his shin on something.

GOD

My shin!

NARRATOR

And so he could repudiate what dared hit his shin, God said...

GOD

Let there be light!

The lights come fully on.

NARRATOR

And then there was light. And God looked around and realized there was nothing.

GOD

It's just me.

NARRATOR

He'd hit his shin on nothing. So, to punish the nothing that dared hit his shin, God decided to make something. And he did.

GOD

Ahhhhhhh.

NARRATOR

With a very minty smelling breath, gasses spilled out. Being God Gas, they had God Stuff in them. They bounced around and hit each other and slowly started to fill up the nothing. God kept breathing..

GOD

Ahhhhhhh.

NARRATOR

And stars formed.

A star enters.

GOD

‘Sup?

STAR

Ohmygawd.

NARRATOR

When God talked to the first stars, He had too much game, they got so flustered and lovesick and embarrassed, they exploded. Yadda yadda yadda, planets.

Some planets enter.

GOD

Any planets out there want to play a game of Sims 777?

NARRATOR

But being that the Sims video game series wouldn't be invented for many years, none of the planets knew what God was on about.

GOD

Fine. I'll play by myself, then.

NARRATOR

As such, God said some magic words:

GOD

Bada bing, bada boom.

NARRATOR

And thus Earth was born.

The rehearsal blocks are slightly rearranged.

GOD

Nice. Good job, God. Hey, wait a second.

NARRATOR

God thought back to when he breathed out that God gas that became stars that became planets, and he realized that he's the only one in the cosmos that breathes. Sure, stars sort of breathe, but not like he does. And the planets had even less breath than the stars. And that made God, though he wouldn't admit it, just a little bit lonely.

GOD

Nuh-uh! Look at all this stuff.

NARRATOR

And like that, there was life. He made a bunch of plants which were cool and pretty to look at, but didn't do much. So he scooped up some plants, squished them together, and threw them into the ocean, where they became a fish.

FISH

Glup.

GOD

Who's a good fishy?

FISH

Glup.

GOD

What's that smell?

NARRATOR

But alas, God discovered that fish have a certain fishy smell to them that's not much to his liking. So he picked up some fish and squished them together.

FISH

Glup!

NARRATOR

And threw them onto the ground. They became dinosaurs.

DINOSAUR

Rawr.

GOD

That means "I love you" in dinosaur.

DINOSAUR

Rawr.

GOD

Your little arms are hilarious.

NARRATOR

But there was one dinosaur God didn't care for too much.

VELOCIRAPTOR

ARF!

GOD

Stay away from me, velociraptor!

NARRATOR

And he said onto the other dinosaurs:

GOD

Keep that away from me.

DINOSAUR

Rawr.

GOD

That means, "I understand and will hold them back" in dinosaur.

NARRATOR

But alas, the tiny arms could not keep hold on the velociraptor.

VELOCIRAPTOR

ARRERFWLUBRFWLKJERFLERF!
